<ul style="list-style-type: none">Great guy, very passionate and super kind, but tasked with teaching a very difficult course that students tend not to like.Ethan was easily the best professor I had this semester. He truly wants his students to understand the content of the course and succeed. He thoroughly explains the content and further engages students in practice problems and homework problems. He makes himself available to students when they have questions, for example he ended the lecture early to explain a homework problem that several students had emailed him questions about. To him, a student's effort to understand content is more important than being stubborn about a grade, so he will change it if he sees progress. His way of testing is beyond memorization and trying to make students' lives harder, which I really appreciate. I definitely would recommend him to others.He explains the concepts and course material really well. He makes sure beyond understands before he moves to the next topic. He's a good professor.
